Looking back at the past year, we see that the Syrian crisis has remained under spotlight, and that significant changes took place in the humanitarian aid sector. While these changes entailed a multitude of challenges, we took part in various heartening practices.

In the beginning of 2017, Support to Life completed one of its major projects; the “Support to Life with E-Cards” project that provided cash assistance to 9,000 refugees every month in order to address their basic needs. With this project transferred to the Turkish Red Crescent, we shifted our focus to “Individual Protection” and “Livelihood Support” activities.

With our Individual Protection activities, we aimed to help all refugees, especially Syrians, have full access to the fundamental rights and basic services provided by the Republic of Turkey. We began operating in 8 cities of Turkey through our Support to Life Hubs.

Access to livelihoods has utmost significance for refugee families to be able to sustain their lives by their own means. Thanks to the protocol signed with The Ministry of Education, and in cooperation with relevant stakeholders, we have been able to provide vocational and language courses that will improve refugees’ access to employment.

We continued our protection activities in our Support to Life Houses; we built spaces for social exchange, and delivered activities in accord with the demand of the communities. These activities have vital importance for facilitation social cohesion and permanent improvement. In our centers, under the framework of our psychosocial support and social cohesion activities, we aimed to empower individuals while paying regard to social dialogue.

2017 has been the year we integrated Child Protection approaches to all our activities. Our activities in Viranşehir, Adana and Zonguldak have evolved into more effective, long-running projects.

I would like to thank all and every one of you for Supporting Life and empowering us by standing in solidarity.

OUR WORK

Refugee Support
We aim to help refugees in Turkey meet their basic needs and rights. We offer vocational trainings to improve livelihoods, and we implement employment projects. Focused on empowering individuals and contributing to social cohesion, we deliver our community-based protection activities through our community centers that we call ‘Support to Life Houses.’ In our ‘Support to Life Hubs,’ we utilize our support teams and provide individual protection as well as personal support.

Child Protection in Seasonal Agriculture
In combatting the issue of child labor in Turkey, we focus our activities on children that have to work, or that are at risk, with a specific focus on the children of families working in seasonal agriculture. The primary goals of our activities in seasonal agriculture are to improve living conditions of children, to raise awareness among family members and employers with regard to the hazards of child labor. The foundation of our work lays on the principles that children’s right to live their childhood needs to be protected and that children need to be empowered through participation in formal education.

Capacity Building in Civil Society
We see a participatory, inclusive and well-coordinated civil society landscape as crucial building blocks for effective and sustainable humanitarian aid. Accordingly, we conduct civil society strengthening activities for effective humanitarian aid and emergency response strategies. In our work, we prioritize collective flow of information; resource and expertise sharing; as well as improving communication and coordination capacities by means of building effective coordination networks amongst civil society organizations.

Emergency Response
In the aftermath of humanitarian disasters, we conduct emergency response operations by means of delivering in-kind and cash-based assistance to disaster-impacted communities. In this context, we aim to address food and non-food needs, deliver cash assistance, improve shelter conditions, as well as respond to water, sanitation and hygiene needs.

As of 2017, Turkey hosts 3.5 million Syrian refugees that had to leave their homes due to war. Their primary needs differ over time and emergency aid interventions leave their place to long-running services.

As Support to Life, since 2012, we have been facilitating non-camp refugees’ access to basic rights and services through our individual protection activities. By means of organizing information sessions, we helped the refugee population stay informed regarding their rights and duties. Under the roofs of our Support to Life Houses, we brought together refugees and host communities to strengthen social cohesion.

With regard to labor market access, which is an important element in the refugee’s integration process, we implemented livelihood projects. We identified prevalent challenges the refugees’ face in the context of employment, and engaged in activities to surmount them. In addition, we provided support to employers to so that refugees can obtain work permits, and supported employment opportunities.

Throughout 2017, with a variety of activities in 8 Turkish cities, we supported the lives of 28,153 refugees in total.

REFUGEE SUPPORT PROGRAM
Individual Protection

It is paramount that refugees living in Turkey are informed about their rights and duties so that they can benefit from the services proved by the government to the fullest extent.

We focus on individuals, especially those from Syria, who found refuge in Turkey due to war or other forms of disaster. Under the framework of our individual protection activities, we provide direct support to individuals in need.

Our activities in this domain fall under three categories; awareness raising, individual protection assistance and case based interventions. We provide information to refugees on their basic rights and duties, health and education services, registration procedures, legal assistance and similar services. In cases where individuals encounter problems when accessing these services, we follow up on a case-by-case basis and refer individuals to relevant institutions.

“The most important thing for me was to get ID cards issued for my husband, myself and our children. With the help of Support to Life, we got them, thank God. With this ID card, I could have my regular controls at the hospital when I was pregnant with my second child. With these IDs, we could get my son Hamid registered to our family. This was very important to me. Now we are officially a family.”

Erima (20), Mardin
We implement our protection activities by identifying the needs of the refugee community with their direct participation. Like before, our focus remained to be empowerment of community members. In order to enable refugees to better cope with problems they may face, we delivered mental health and psychosocial support activities. In order to strengthen social cohesion, we organized various activities that aimed to facilitate cultural exchange and contribute to the practice of living together. To combat child labor, we provided information sessions to families and handled school referrals.

We covered children’s initial needs when starting school, and helped families navigate enrollment processes. In the context of school referrals, we helped 999 children in 8 cities access their right to education and continue studying. Our community centers, called Support to Life Houses, were instrumental in making this possible.

Support to Life Hubs

Individual protection activities are a crucial aspect of our Refugee Support Program. During 2017, they have reached their widest scope so far. Previously implemented in Istanbul, Hatay, Şanlıurfa and Diyarbakır, these activities are now widened in scope with new centers made operational in Kayseri, Mersin, Adana, Mardin and Akçașale region of Şanlıurfa.

In these centers called “Support to Life Hubs,” we continued our activities in 8 cities, in cooperation with public institutions, municipalities and service providers including Social Service Centers and Social Solidarity Foundations. We have provided protection assistance to a total of 7,930 refugees. With information and awareness-raising sessions focusing on rights and services, we have reached 10,580 individuals. With the support of our field teams, we have followed 895 cases, handling due procedures and referrals.

Community Based Protection

We acknowledge that cohesion between the host community and the Syrian population, the majority of which is living in Turkey for a long time, is of utmost importance for the beginnings of this new life refugees have.

I am an English teacher. For the first time in 5 years, I can do my own job in Turkey. I was informed about what to do to obtain my working permit and how to benefit from social security thanks to the consultancy Support to Life offered. My life is in order now. I want to complete my higher education and Support to Life is guiding me through that process as well.

Halid (28), Diyarbakır

I hadn’t been able to attend school since we arrived from Syria, I had to work. This was a gap of 4 years. I loved chemistry. By biggest dream is to go on studying and become a pharmacist or chemist. Support to Life collected the necessary documents for my enrollment to school and helped me realize my dream. From here onwards, I will study hard to make it to the university.

Anita (17), Mardin
Support to Life Houses

Like in the previous years, our community centers, called Support to Life Houses, hosted various workshops, trainings and activities targeting refugees.

Our mental health activities focus on mitigating psychological difficulties refugees may be experiencing. In this context, we offer individual and group counseling sessions. Our psychosocial support activities are oriented at introducing preventive and empowering mechanisms, as well as facilitating social integration.

As part of our skills building activities, we implement programs that help adults in their daily lives, and assist school-aged refugees with their education. In addition, in the context of our income generating skills building activities, we focus on the significance of language skills in finding employment and deliver language courses. The participants that complete their trainings, which are delivered as part of our protocol with the Public Education Center, receive official certificates approved by the Ministry of Education. Another goal of our community centers is to contribute to social cohesion. We work in coordination with relevant institutions and organize activities that focus on transforming negative perception towards refugees, increasing intercultural exchange and strengthening practices of living together.

In 2017, in our Support to Life Houses operating under the framework of Refugee Support Program, we supported the lives of 18,476 individuals in total during 2017.

Newborn Support Activities

According to the Disaster and Emergency Management Presidency (AFAD), 225,000 Syrian babies were born in Turkey since the refugee influx began in 2011. We acknowledge that the newborns are vulnerable, often born into inadequate conditions, and focus on them with specific support activities.

In the last quarter of 2017, under the framework of projects we design to respond to specific needs of populations in need, especially those with Syrian origin, we launched support activities focusing on mothers that have recently given birth or that are pregnant. These projects were implemented in cooperation with local directorates of health in Şanlıurfa, Diyarbakır, Mardin, Kayseri, İstanbul, Hatay, Adana and Mersin. We delivered pregnancy and newborn care trainings. 3,346 mothers that attended the trainings were provided with a care-kit consisting of diapers, a changing pad, baby shampoo, rash cream, baby’s nail clip, underwear, socks, a hat and similar items needed in the first months of care. In addition, a health guide was provided, covering information on infant development in Arabic and Turkish.

Individual donations were greatly significant in enabling us to support to lives of the newborns. Thanks to the campaigns led by our volunteer runners participating in Antalya (March) and İstanbul (November) Marathons as part of #KoşalımDaBüyüsün project, we were able to cover the primary needs of 700 mothers and their babies.

When we arrived in Turkey, neither I or my children could speak Turkish. My neighbor says something and I cannot even understand it. Not knowing a language is very hard. I took my kids and went to the Support to Life House. We all began learning Turkish. We learned a language, made friends. Support to Life became a new family for us. Now my children are going to school and I can speak Turkish comfortably. I attend all the courses the deliver.

İlham (35), İstanbul

We’ve arrived in Turkey only recently. I had to give birth to my second child at the border. We wrapped my baby in a blanket and kept going. Until this pack arrived Ahmet had nothing, not even clothes. No soap, no shampoo; I hadn’t been able to wash my son even once. When I received Support to Life’s baby care pack I could finally give my son a bath, put clothes on him.

Hicran (27), Şanlıurfa
Technology Classrooms

In cooperation with Google.org and Tides Foundation, we assembled classrooms for technological access that would bring together Syrian and Turkish children, as well as grown-ups for tech learning. During the first phase of our project, fully equipped technology classrooms were assembled in 8 schools in 8 different cities identified by the Ministry of Education, as well as the Support to Life Houses in Hatay and Şanlıurfa. A total of 221 adults and 8,889 children benefited from these classrooms and are continuing to do so.

Vaccination Campaign

In 5 cities, we participated in the vaccination campaign launched by the Ministry of Health Public Health Directorate. We assisted the campaign with our field teams and translation support in Adana, Diyarbakır, Kayseri, Mardin and Mersin. With these efforts, we contributed to a health future for 981 refugee children, who were vaccinated.

It’s been more than a year since I came to Turkey with my two children. We were doing well in Syria; we had a comfortable living. Here, I felt lost. I was worried. At first, I was hesitant to start the course. I am glad I did. The gastronomy course has been good for me in many respects. I got to learn a vocation, I got out of the house, made friends, felt confident and became at ease. Now I want to open a small shop and send my daughter to school.

Rana (42), Mardin
With the Livelihood Support Project, my life became orderly and well-planned. We were explained what our rights were right after we were recruited. With my earlier jobs, I wasn't getting my pay regularly. But here we don't have the difficulties of being employed without any security. Thanks to this place, I make a living and can dream of a better future for my family.

Start Here

You are 19 years old boy. You are studying for the university exams and do good job in your classes. Your dad is a lawyer and he is earning money to provide you a good future. Your mom is retired and has diabetes.

---

There are mass protests in different parts of the country, which quickly escalate into violent conflict. Your school says the classes will be continued. Will you go?

- Yes
  - You keep on attending your classes. Due to greater security concerns in other cities, most of the city police have been relocated elsewhere.

- No
  - You stay home because the streets are not safe anymore. The classes get cancelled after a white sniffer.

You get attacked on the way back, someone steals your phone and your wallet.

- Yes
  - The hospital you visit to take your mom’s medication is very crowded because other hospitals are not open anymore.

- No
  - You wait for hours, when you finally leave, it is dark outside.

Hospitals are closed and you cannot find your mom’s insulin. The city is not safe. Will you stay here?

- Yes
  - Your dad is missing. You and your mom leave your apartment. You go through many checkpoints and after 6 hours, reach the next city. There is not safe either, phone lines are down. Will you stay?

- No
  - You couldn’t survive the war. Will you listen to them?

There was an explosion nearby and thousands of people are heading for the border. Will you stay?

- Yes
  - You try to find a way to cross the border without an ID. A man you find tells you that you can take you across at night, but you will have to give him all the money you have.

- No
  - We try to cross the border illegally

You pay half of the money in advance. You go to the meeting spot in 3 hours, no one shows up.

---

Welcome!

You complete the border crossing in very small steps. You are provided with basic food and shelter and can start your journey heading north. You and your mom get back together.

Through skills building workshops, language courses and certified vocational trainings, we help individuals acquire the experience and information they need in order to access formal employment. Under the framework of our Refugee Support Program, we implement our projects with an outlook for sustainability, permanent improvement and social cohesion.

In 2017, we ran various projects in Adana, Hatay, Mersin, Şanlıurfa, Mardin and Istanbul to support livelihoods. As part of the project launched in cooperation with Seyhan Municipality of Adana and Adana Chamber of Agricultural Engineers, a total of 250 individuals evenly identified from the refugee community and host population were temporarily employed in Seyhan for parks-gardens and agricultural businesses. In addition in Istanbul, Adana and Mersin; 143 individuals received vocational trainings on different domains, 72 individuals received Turkish language classes, 76 Syrian refugees received work permits and 22 people received in-kind assistance consisting of items such as sewing machines, hair-styling or make up kits to start their own businesses.

Livelihood Support

It is estimated that of all the refugees residing in Turkey who are fit for work, approximately half are unemployed. The majority of Syrians who work do so informally, in temporary jobs and without social security.

“I’ve been working in the fields since I was 9. We live in Urfa. When work starts, we hit the road as the whole family. Melons, watermelons, beets, hazelnuts...I harvested all of them. The hardest is hoeing, takes two months. We work reaching down all day, unable to lift our heads. My dream was to study and become a licensed football player. It’s hard for the likes of us. I quit school way back. I hope my siblings can study.

CHILD PROTECTION IN SEASONAL AGRICULTURE

According to 2017 data, there are approximately 2017 child workers worldwide. The estimates that the number is over 1 million in Turkey, and that 57% of these children are working in agriculture.

Our activities focusing on children that work or are at risk of working in migratory seasonal agriculture were continued throughout 2017. An impediment to children’s access to rights is the migration seasonal agriculture entails, which is one of the harshest forms of child labor. Like in the previous years, we joined families on their long journey through the fields with our mobile teams and provided psychosocial support to children in the fields.

Field Activities

Up until April, the month families begin their migration route, we closely followed the development of children in our Support to Life House in Şanlıurfa, Viranşehir - the population of which consists mostly of seasonal agricultural workers.

94 children benefited from the activities we conducted in Viranşehir. In addition, we provided support for 37 children’s enrollment to school. Through information and awareness-raising sessions, we reached 605 adults.

With the beginning of harvest season, our child protection moved to the camping grounds in Adana Çaputlu, where families working in seasonal agricultural live. A container classroom was used for various activities with children. By August, our mobile activities were moved to Zonguldak, Alaplı for the children of families working in hazelnut harvests. With our mobile teams, we provided psychosocial support to more than 200 children. In both fields, we organized information sessions for families and employers. In addition, we provided support for Turkish and Syrian families registering their children in schools. This has been especially successful in Adana region, where our referral and registration support activities managed to facilitate enrollment of 49 children.
CAPACITY BUILDING IN CIVIL SOCIETY

Capacity building activities based on exchange of knowledge and expertise is crucial for effective results and efficient practices in civil society organizations.

Internal Trainings

With the aim of increasing our institutional capacity, we focused on internal trainings and made sure that each and every team member is aligned with international standards of humanitarian aid.

We made sure that information covering the origins and international standards of humanitarian aid, as well as our institutional principles are disseminated across all fields with the workshops received by 191 employees. We updated our Support to Life Code of Conduct document and shared it with 181 employees in workshops that featured case studies and examples.

Another focus of the workshops we organized to build our capacity was concerning Child Safety Policy and Child Safety Code of Conduct. With these workshops, we reached 164 employees and focused on the difference between child protection and child safety, sensibilities when working with children and steps to follow when setting up a child safety system.

In order to disseminate and implement our work on quality and Core Humanitarian Standards, which constitute the basis for our principles of accountability, we delivered 2-day trainings to 115 employees in Kayseri, Şanlıurfa, Diyarbakır, Adana and Hatay.

Child Safety Trainings

Child safety is a significant component of humanitarian aid and protection activities especially in cases where children are affected by conflicts and natural disasters. This year, we strived to disseminate expertise in this domain.

Disasters and their aftermath entail great risks of abuse. As an organization focusing on disaster situations, we began striving to build our own capacity and implement child safety standards. Following this, we engaged in activities that aim to disseminate expertise on the domain.

We initiated our project, Strengthening Child Safety Capacity in Turkey, with the aim of building child safety capacities or strengthening existing capacities in institutions whose work focus on children or who come in contact with children during their operations. As part of this project, we organized Volunteer Trainer Trainings in cooperation with Terre des Hommes (Tdh) Germany. 16 participants from different cities, civil society organizations, humanitarian aid organizations and public institutions participated in the trainings.

With the assistance of our child safety team, the volunteer trainers will continue their trainings in order to build their child safety capacities. In later stages of the project, these trainers will deliver child safety trainings to public institutions, private institutions and civil society organizations in different Turkish cities.

Another component of the project focuses on supporting community-based organizations willing to strengthen their child safety capacity by means of grants. The grant program will begin at the end of 2018.

International Coordination Networks

Being a member of its steering committee, we took responsibility for the Turkish component of NEAR project implemented in 5 countries. As part of this project, which aims to empower local civil society and humanitarian aid actors, we identified 5 Syrian civil society organizations in Turkey and began providing support. Having the role of a facilitator, we will be providing these organizations with opportunities for conducting institutional needs assessment, strategic capacity and fundraising programming, as well as opportunities for exchanging knowledge and experience with global civil society actors.
We continued to closely follow disaster related needs in Turkey and its surrounding region. We provided needs assessment and aid in the form of non-food items. In addition, we conducted activities to increase our operational capacity in emergency response.

Our aid team closely monitored the Iranian earthquake of 12 November 2017, the center of which was Kermanshah with a magnitude of 7.3. The team visited the area and held meetings with the Iranian Red Crescent, local civil society organizations and disaster-affected individuals. Following these meetings, a quick needs assessment report was prepared and shared with relevant institutions.

In December, 28 Iraqi families (120 individuals) residing in Batman’s Beşiri village were reached with coordination of AFAD Batman Directorate. In addition, our individual protection teams identified 63 Syrian families residing in Akçaale, Şanlıurfa. These families had recently arrived in Turkey and did not have appropriate shelter. Our teams provided the families with mattresses, blankets, carpets, furniture, hygiene kits and non-food items.
As Support to Life, we kept transparent accounts of our finances by means of independent audits, as well as publishing their details on our website. We upheld accountability in doing our work.

You can send an SMS using your mobile phone and become a regular supporter, pledging a support of 10 TL/month.

All you need to do is type HAYATADESTEK and send to 8071.

Respond to the confirmation by typing EVET.

By doing so, support life by contributing 10 TL/month.
There are other ways of Supporting Life

Make special occasions even more special
You can share the joy by donating on behalf of your loved ones. We will send special certificates to your loved ones on special occasions like New Year’s Eve, Mother’s Day, Fathers Day, Teachers Day, Valentines Day or birthdays.

We can also send your employees celebration cards for appreciation, promotions, welcoming or holidays.

Chase a good cause
You can join marathons with Adım Adım collective and become a Support to Life runner, and call out to your social network to support your cause.

Donate voluntary services
Donate your voluntary services and expertise on graphic design, architecture, drawing & painting, management, law, finance or accounting consultancy to help us alleviate social problems.

Support us with your institution
Contact us and we can hold a meeting to find out how to support life together. We will design tailor-made projects for your institution.

You can reach us at destekol@hayatadestek.org.

FOLLOW US
You can make us heard by more people by following our social media accounts. By doing so, you can help us raise awareness on the issue of child labor, and on refugees’ needs and rights.
